The Fort Riley Manoeuvers of 1902

By Lieutenant Colonel, B. C. Tilghman, Third Infantry

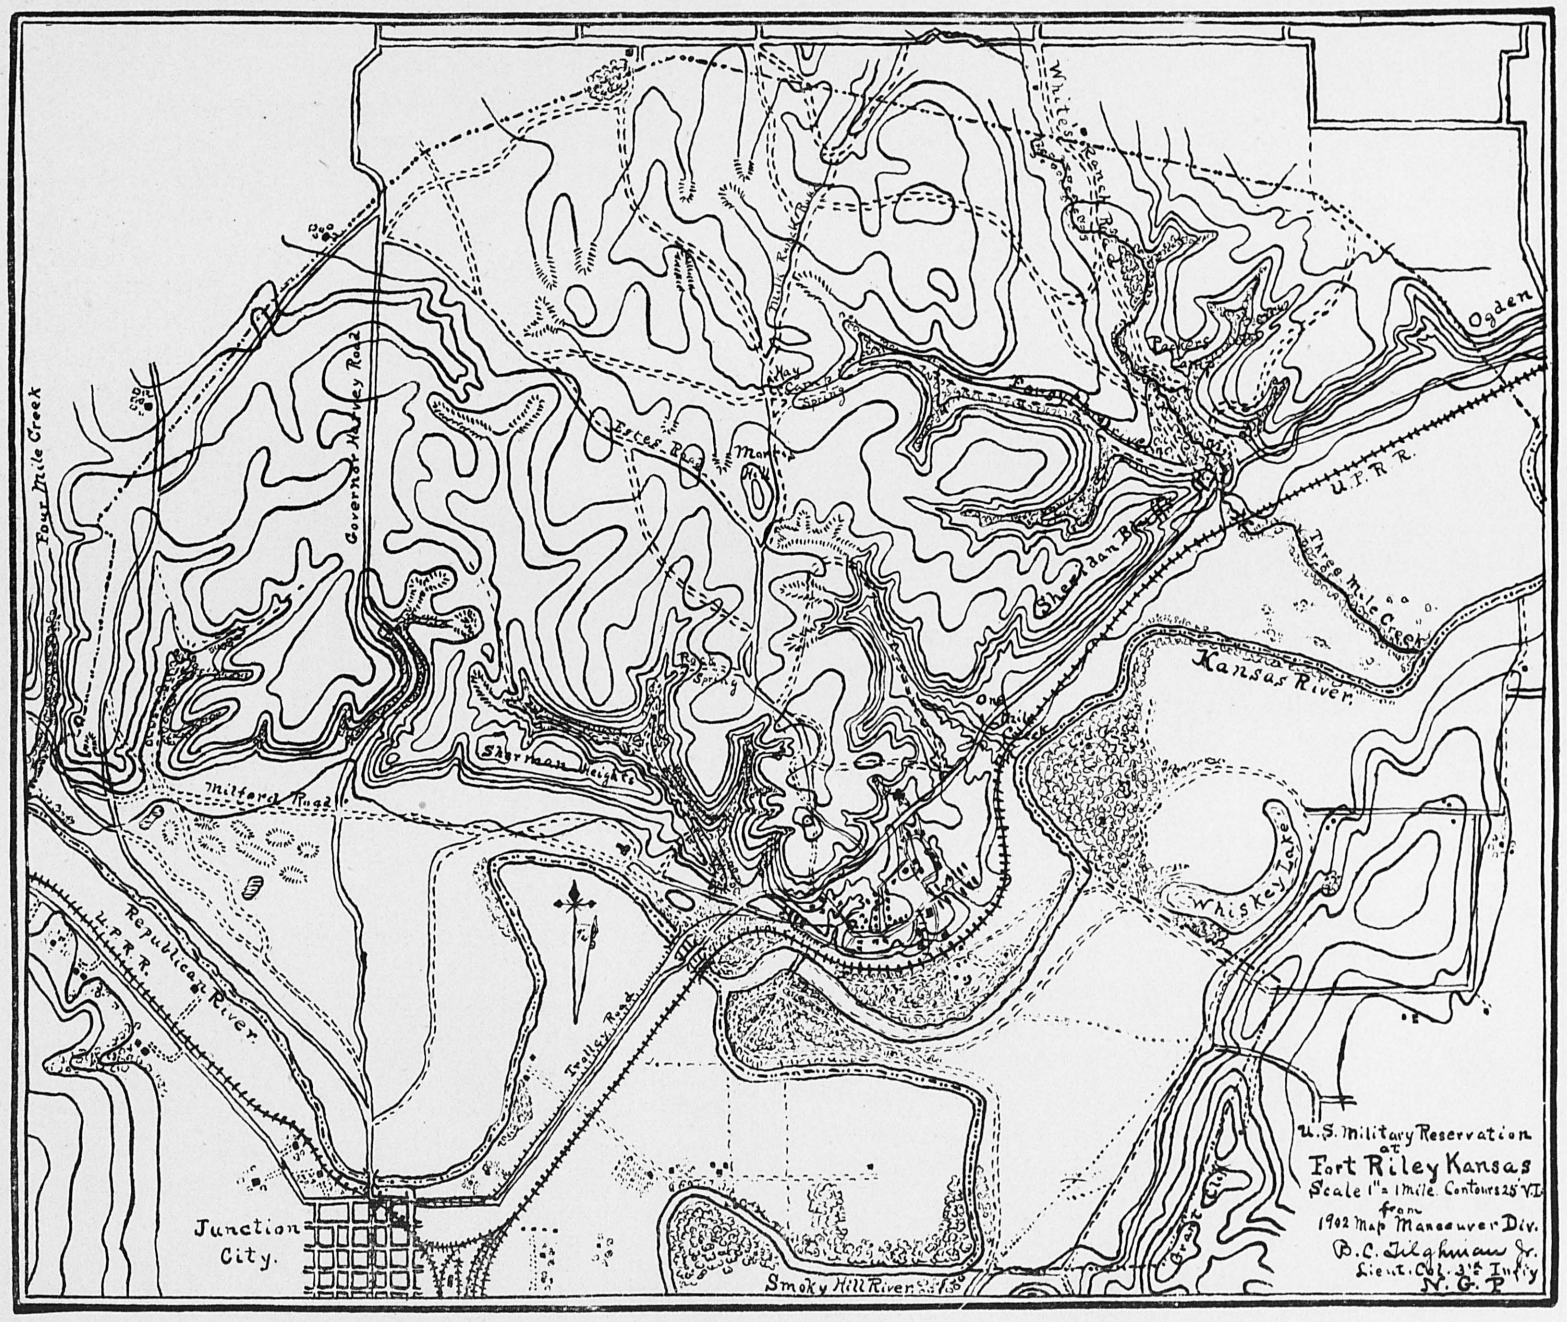
THE autumn manoeuvres of the United States Army were held in the year 1902 on the United States Military Reservation, at Fort Riley, Kansas, from September 23d to October 8th, inclusive.

Manoeuvres of the troops from single departments had been held before, but this was the first time in which they were conducted on a large scale. It was also the first time that troops from the National Guards of the neighboring States were invited to participate or that National Guard officers from all the States were invited as spectators of the manoeuvres. It is sincerely to be hoped that it marks the beginning of a new era of more intimate association between the National and State forces. Owing to the lateness of the notice given, only the troops of Kansas and Colorado took part, but representatives of almost all the States were present among the visiting officers.

As the value of such an experience to a National Guard Officer cannot be over estimated, and as all of our ambitious officers shonld endeavor to be selected for this detail, if possible, at their earliest opportunity, some general account of the conditions under which the visiting officers attended may be of interest.

On arrival at the station visiting officers are met by ambulances and quartermasters' wagons and furnished free transportation for person and baggage to the camp. On arrival they register at the information bureau and present their credentials to the Adjutant of the camp, and are assigned to a tent. This is a regular officer's, 9x9 wall tent, well ditched, but perfectly empty and without a board floor. Therefore everything required must be either brought or purchased on the spot. At Riley last year the visiting officers were allowed to buy quartermaster stores and sundries from the post exchange, and there were also representatives of camp furniture manufacturers, etc., about so that everything needed could be brought. It is, however, much safer to bring everything needful.

In the exercises and manoeuvres the troops taking part are divided up into two sides, called the "Blues" and the "Browns," wearing blue and kahki respectively. As it is unknown until the night before the exercises which side the visiting officers will accompany, it is necessary to be equipped with both kinds of uniforms.



And as the temperature varied during the last manoeuvres from a sharp frost in the early morning to nearly 90 degrees in the sun at midday, assorted weights of underclothing and an overcoat are necessaries.

The messing arrangements consisted in a very large tent—in fact a small circus tent—which would seat some two hundred and over at a time, and kitchens were established alongside of the camp by a caterer who furnished very fair camp food at fifty cents per meal.

Any tobacco or liquor desired must be brought or obtained by express. In case of sickness or injury the hospital company present will take full charge of the patient.

It is much more pleasant and also generally more instructive to go to the manoeuvres mounted, but it is not at all impossible to go on foot. Last year the Government furnished one troop horse and equipment for each State—for the use of its senior officer present, and as on no occasion did more than about forty-five officers wish to go mounted, there was no difficulty in any officer who wished getting a mount. They were mostly green troop horses, of excellent quality, but rough gaited and the vast majority not bridle-wise.

In future years there will certainly be more officers in attendance and the above conditions will not prevail, and it will be advisable for junior officers to take their own horse equipment with them if they desire to go mounted. Horses can be hired at Junction City and in the surronding country for about $3.00 per day and upwards. They are usually of poor quality, and would probably object strongly to the infantry and artillery firing. The Government horses cannot be used at any time of the day except for the actual exercise.

Each visiting officer should also provide himself with the best field glass procurable, as nothing can be seen without it—and also with a pocket compass, note book, fountain pen or indeliable pencil, and a topographic map of the reservation.

The troops assembled for these manoeuvres were the Sixth, Eighteenth, and Twenty-second Regiments of Infantry, one Battalion of Engineers, one squadron Eighth Calvary, and two squadrons Fourth Cavalry; Sixth, Seventh, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth Twenty-eighth Batteries Field Artillery. The last was a mountain battery. A detachment of the Signal Corps, a division hospital and a pack train, all U. S. Army; also First and Second Kansas Infantry and one battalion Colorado Infantry.

The post at Fort Riley is the permanent home of the Cavalry and Light Artillery Schools of the United States Army, and is one of the most complete in the country. It has extensive barracks, stables, gun sheds and riding hall, officers quarters—quartermaster's and other store buildings of the finest grade and ample for the accommodation of a squadron of cavalry and several light batteries—and is in itself well worth a visit. But during these manoeuvres it was almost entirely deserted, the troops stationed there all being under canvass in the manoeuvre camp with the rest of the troops on the flats east of One Mile Creek.

As can be seen from the map published in this number of "The State Army and Navy" the reservation contains about 22,000 acres, and is situated at the junction of the Republican and Smoky Hill Rivers, which here unite to form the Kansas River. All these rivers flow through flat bottom lands a mile or so wide, which in the fall are covered with coarse grass and sedge several feet tall. At the edge of these bottom lands the ground rises abruptly some one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five feet in steep bluffs, up which it is impracticable to move even infantry troops in any formation except widely extended, and single horses can only ascend or descend with care and difficulty in favorable places. The bulk of the reservation lies on the north side of the rivers named and extends along them about eight miles.

In this distance from east to west there are the following breaks in the bluffs: Three Mile Creek, One Mile Creek, Pump House Cañon, Governor Harvey Road Cañon, and Four Mile Creek. For a mile or less above the points where these valleys cut through the bluff their sides are almost as steep as the front of the bluffs, and their bottoms contain small creeks, either dry or with water, and are covered with thick low timber and underbrush. Further back the sides become less steep, and the valleys branch out and gradually change into a rolling plain, entirely bare except for grass about a foot to eighteen inches high—just enough to give good cover to troops lying prone.

From the high points the country looks perfectly open and impossible to move troops across unseen, but when more closely examined is found to contain much cover both from fire and view, and to need careful reconnaissance to be sure it contains no enemy. The roads and communications can be seen from an examination of the map, however, a mile back from the bluffs, all arms can manoeuvre freely over the whole country regardless of roads, except for some nasty little clay gulleys with straight sides, some two to five feet deep, which are hidden in the grass in the middle of some of the valleys, and which, if come upon suddenly when riding fast are apt to make trouble. The greater number of these are shown on the map, although it is not quite complete in this respect.

The manouevres were under the supervision of Colonel Arthur Wagner, A. A. G., U. S. A., as Umpire-in-Chief, assisted by a number of other officers—who constituted the Board of Umpires—and umpires were assigned to accompany each separate detachment of the troops of each side, so far as their numbers permitted. The decision of the umpires was absolute as to all questions such as permitting the further advance of troops or the necessity of their retreat and was obeyed instantly and without question.

The umpires alone knew what were the conditions on both sides of the fight as the orders to the respective commanders contained only such information about the enemy as could be obtained in actual war by scouting and the reports of spies, etc., and in most cases left the officer receiving them much in the dark as to the actual strength and direction of march and intentions of the opposing force, thus adding much to the reality of the problem.

The orders were so framed, however, as to bring the opposite sides into contact on some portion of the reservation.

The umpires made their decisions in accordance with the following set of rules, published in Circular No. 1, Headquarters Manoeuvres Division, Ft. Riley, Kan., September 20. 1902:

a. If fired upon within one hundred and fifty (150) yards by dismounted men, scouts, or the members of a patrol in advance, riding rapidly or otherwise, will be considered captured.

b. Should a deployed patrol be fired upon within two hundred (200) yards by a dismounted patrol on its flank, the flanker on the side nearest the enemy will halt and be considered captured. Unless much superior in numbers to the attackers, the remainder of the patrol will retire rapidly. In other cases the result and loss will be determined by the Umpires.

CAVALRY.

a. Cavalry charges must stop at one hundred (100) yards from the enemy.

b. Cavalry standing to receive a charge must be declared defeated.

c. Should cavalry, although somewhat inferior in strength, succeed in delivering an attack upon cavalry, while deploying, it should be judged victorious.

d. In a cavalry vs. cavalry charge, no manoeuvres should be made so close to the point of contact as to endanger the steadiness and order necessary in the delivery of the shock.

e. In a cavalry vs. cavalry charge, of comparatively equal strength and in proper formation, the victory should belong to the side last bringing up a formed reserve.

INFANTRY OR DISMOUNTED CAVALRY.

a. When exposed to fire of infantry or dismounted cavalry which is less than eight hundred (800) yards away, bodies of cavalry can appear in attack formation only. Any flank movements made in the open without cover, when so exposed, must be decided to the disadvantage of the troops thus moving.

b. When unprepared and attacked by cavalry on the flank, infantry or dismounted cavalry, even though somewhat superior in strength, should be considered defeated, provided the attackers be not discovered until they are within four hundred yards.

c. If, before beginning to fire, an infantry or dismounted cavalry force, even though somewhat superior in strength, allows a cavalry opponent to attack in line within three hundred (300) yards, the advantage ought ordinarily to be awarded to the mounted party. A screened approach and surprise is an important element.

d. If a well directed and sudden volley be delivered at short range by infantry or dismounted cavalry under cover or concealed, it should demoralize the party surprised to a great extent.

e. Over a zone swept by dismounted fire at less than eight hundred (800) yards troops can move backward and forward and in attack formations only. An uncovered halt made for any length of time within this zone, would necessitate an Umpire's decision.

f. When a flank is turned the defenders must fall back or execute a change of front, before the attacking party has delivered a heavy fire at a range of five hundred (500) yards or less.

g. In all the exercises the greatest care and attention will be devoted to fire discipline. Ammunition will be carefully husbanded and fire will only be used where, under the conditions of war, something could be accomplished by it.

ARTILLERY.

a. Cavalry cannot move at a walk when exposed to the fire of artillery which is less than twenty-five hundred (2500) yards away.

b. When cavalry attacks artillery in front the charge must be made in extended order, and the escort should be attacked at the same time by cavalry in close order.

c. When on the move or when unlimbering or limbering up unprotected artillery is at the mercy of a cavalry attack. Guns in action have to fear for their unsupported flank.

d. A column fired upon by artillery at a distance of less than twenty-five hundred (2500) yards must deploy or move at a rapid gait. In applying this rule Umpires will make an exception when the terrain is such as to afford shelter to the troops, or to interfere with the effective use of the artillery.

e. Artillery cannot come into action under infantry or dismounted cavalry fire within eight hundred (800) yards, excepting under favorable circumstances: behind effectual cover for instance. This, however, would not prevent it from accompanying advancing lines under cover of their fire to a decisive attack, but it should not be able to unlimber at all within six hundred (600) yards of an enemy.

f. At ranges of one thousand (1000) yards artillery can hold out against dismounted skirmish fire, but should strong skirmish lines succeed in approaching to within six hundred (600) yards of the guns, without the latter being sufficiently protected by infantry or dismounted cavalry and proper cover, the artillery must retire promptly or be judged unfit to move.

g. Artillery cannot come into action against artillery already in action at less than twelve hundred (1200) yards unless enabled to do so by effectual infantry or dismounted cavalry fire or by ample cover.

Each morning the troops assigned to the two sides were assembled in a column and marched off usually at a different hour and in a different direction to the spot appointed for each commander. These marches were made in route step and with the simple object of getting the troops into position to begin the exercise—like setting the men on the board for a game of chess or checkers.

When each detachment arrived at its destination, at which time they were usually several miles apart, they were halted and the commander of each assembled the commanding officer of his different organizations and instructed them as to his orders,—his intended method of carrying them out and as much as he knew of the enemy and their probable movements, and issued to them such orders as he desired. The commanders of the different organizations then did likewise with their own officers. At the appointed hour the detachment was again put in motion, but this time with advance cavalry, advance rear and flank guards and acting in all respects as if in the immediate neighborhood of the enemy and expecting actual contact at any moment.

Owing to the comparatively small size of the reservation in relation to the forces employed contact usually occurred in from twenty minutes to a half hour after movement from the designated rendezvous, in no case was it delayed longer than forty-five minutes.

The visiting officers, under charge of an aide-de-camp, usually left camp much later than the troops and rode direct, either to one or the other rendezvous, or selected a position between the two hostile forces and waited for contact to occur somewhere near them. After leaving the camp the problem and the general and special orders of each side were read to them so as they could take an intelligent interest in the movements of the various bodies of troops which they could see.

As the groop of visiting officers was usually from forty to forty-five strong, or about the strength of a weak troop of cavalry, it can be readily seen that it was not possible to allow its members to straggle or the group itself to go to places other than those fixed upon beforehand without it or its members being mistaken for hostile troops or scouts by one side or the other, or both, and thus confusing the exercises. Therefore all visiting officers were required to remain closely attached to their groups. The only exception was in case a visiting officer received an invitation from an officer commanding troops to accompany his command during the day's exercises. This was permitted and was in many respects the most interesting way of seeing the exercises—as it brought the visiting officers into closer contact with the actual command of the regular troops than any other way. Its disadvantage, however, was that on account of accompanying one of the combatant forces no opportunity was given to hear the whole of the problem.

The schedule of exercises was prepared in advance, but on account of the bad weather it could not be adhered to. The exercises actually performed during the time the visiting officers were in the camp were as follows:

September 29, problem of contact of opposing forces of all arms.
September 30, rain.
October 1, attack and defense of a convoy.
October 2, attack and defense of an outpost.
October 3, rain.
October 4, rain.
October 5, Sunday.
October 6, attack and defense of a position.
October 7, deployment of a force for battle.

The fire losses were adjudged by the following tab'e :—

FIRE LOSSES

Loss per minute, skirmishers at a halt or advancing

(Exposed to Fire of equal numbers)

Range	Ordinary Fire	Remarks
Under 600 Yards	½ of 1 per cent	Losses vary
600 to 1,000 yards	⅓ of 1 per cent	with size of
1,000 to 2,000 yards	⅙ of 1 per cent	opposing force

Losses of Cavalry, mounted, extended order, 8 times as great.
Losses of Cavalry, mounted, close order, 16 times as great.
Losses of Artillery, in action, unsheltered, 10 times as great.

FIRE LOSSES

Loss per minute of infantry, deployed and exposed to shrapnell.

FIRE OF SIX-GUN BATTERY

Range	Ordinary Fire	Remarks
1,000 yards and under	2 per cent	Losses vary depending upon
1,500 to 3,000 yards	1 per cent	volume of rifle fire to which battery is subjected Losses to Cavalry, mounted, at a halt, extended order 8 times as great.

Losses to Cavalry, mounted, at a halt, close order, 16 times as great.
Losses to Artillery, in action, unsheltered, 10 times as great.

THE State National Guard Association, at its recent meeting, discussed some very interesting matters. The most important question, however, was overlooked, and that was to take some action on the antagonism displayed by the labor organizations towards our service. It has developed that some of these unions openly correspond with members of the Guard and in a mandatory way tell them their connection must cease at the expiration of their term of enlistment. The term applicable to a notice of this kind is treason and drastic measures should be used to punish these offenders who are thus trying to strangle the protective forces of the State.

THE cap worn by Colonel Richardson in the illustration on page 9 is the new full-dress United States Army regulation which has been adopted by the National Guard of Pennsylvania. For all officers above the rank of captain the embroidered visor will be worn and the plain visor for captains and officers below that grade. The color and shades of the center band designates the arm of service and the departments, as, for instance, light blue interwoven edges of half inch bands of gold for Infantry; yellow for Cavalry; red for Artillery; scarlet and white for Engineer's Corps; maroon for Medical Department; buff for Quartermasters, and dark blue for the several staffs.

The following have been selected to be present at the Interstate National Guard Association meeting to be held at Columbus, Ohio, on May 4th:

Staff of Commander-in-Chief:

The Adjutant General,
Colonel Samuel Moody,
Colonel Albert J. Logan,
Colonel Frank K. Patterson.

Division Headquarters:

The Major General,
Colonel Joseph K. Weaver,
Colonel Wm. F. Richardson,
Colonel William J. Elliott.

First Brigade Headquarters:

General John W. Schall,
Colonel Wendell P. Bowman,
Colonel Henry T. Dechert,
Captain Charles J. Hendler.

Second Brigade Headquarters:

General John A. Wiley,
Colonel Willis J. Hulings,
Colonel James E. Barnett,
Captain Wm. K. Reifsnyder,
Captain C. S. W. Jones, representing Cavalry.

Third Brigade Headquarters:

General J. P. S. Gobin,
Colonel L. A. Watres,
Colonel C. Bow Dougherty,
Major Simon B. Cameron.

Personal Mention

The appointment of Homer J. Lindsay, of Pittsburg, on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief as Lieutenant Colonel and Aide-de-Camp was a very popular one and was received with much pleasant comment by the officers throughout the Second Brigade district, among whom he has a large acquaintance. Colonel Lindsay is a peculiarly self-made man, rising step by step in the Carnegie Steel Co., until to-day he holds the high and responsible position of Assistant to the President. With his excellent executive ability and military training he will no doubt make a valuable and efficient staff officer in the service. For over eight years he served in the Fourteenth Regiment Infantry, in which command he originally enlisted as a musician in Company "K," For many years he has been one of the senior officers of the United Boys' Brigade, which in the western section of the State comprises a well trained body of young men. Some of these lads who, but a few years ago, received their first military instructions from Colonel Lindsay, are to-day serving in the United States Army with distinction, and many of these also entered the National Guard of Pennsylvania. The Colonel is also one of the prominent ad representative members of the Duquesne Club.

NOTES

Second Regiment

Lieutenant and Commissary William C. Carpenter, Jr., is temporarily located in Pittsburg. He seems to be deeply interested in the inspections of the local regiments.

The system adopted by the Board of Officers of the Second Regiment in running their club quarters is very fine, and is yielding the regiment a substantial income. All city armories should have like inducements for their members.

Third Regiment

Sergeant John Milheim, of Company "H" has been promised the unanimous support of his company for a lieutenancy.

The Third Regiment Infantry will celebrate its Fifth Anniversary as entering into the United States service in the war with Spain by a street parade in full dress uniform on Saturday afternoon, May 9th. It is expected that a general entertainment will be provided after the parade.

Colonel Price has tendered the position of regimental chaplain and captain to Dr. John D. Skilton, D. D., principal of the Cheltenham Military Academy. Dr. Skilton for several years was actively connected with the famous First Cleveland Troop of Cavalry, and is a thorough soldier and greatly interested in the work.

The companies of this regiment have shown up remarkably well at the inspections just completed by Major Worman, and it is openly stated that their general average, if not equal, will be very close to that of the First Infantry. Several of the companies that have been low numerically have taken on new life under the command of their junior officers. Companies "F" and "H" particularly made a fine showing.

Fourth Regiment

Ex-Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant R. Otto Woolmuth will shortly be appointed to the position of Inspector of Rifle Practice.

Because of the lack of space in its armory, Company G, Fourth Regiment, stationed at Pine Grove, was inspected during the afternoon and on the streets this year.

Capt. Jas. Archibald, formerly in command of Co. F, the Fourth Infantry, stationed at Pottsville, tendered a supper to Colonel C. T. O'Neill and his staff on March 28th, prior to the inspection of Company "F."

A sentry in the Fourth Regiment in repeating his general orders to the inspector, said he would "repeat all breaches of orders I am instructed to enforce," and that he would "salute all officers and standards not cased."

Captain Geo. R. Kalbach, of Company "F," who recently resigned, was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, having served with the regiment all through that campaign. The service loses a very efficient officer in Captain Kalbach's retirement.

There is some talk of electing Captain Harry C. Hoffman, formerly the Adjutant of the Eighth Regiment, to fill the captaincy of Company "F." Many officers of the regiment, however, are loath to sanction the promotion of an Eighth Regiment officer in the Fourth.

Fifth Regiment

The same old thread-bare, moss-grown chestnut, that the Fifth Regiment will be broken up after inspection, has been started on its annual round. It is time for the fool killer to take a hand in this matter and stop such rumors.

The congregation of the Chestnut Avenue M. E. Church, Altoona, have unanimously asked the annual conference that met in this city on March 25, to return Rev. J. K. Lloyd, chaplain of the Fifth Regiment, to that charge for another year.

The companies of the Fifth Regiment have all been hard at work getting ready for the semi-annual inspection, which, in this command, will not be until the latter part of April, as it is the last organization in the brigade to face Major Jeffries.

Battalion Sergeant Major Samuel H. Johnston, of the Fifth Regiment, who for several years past has been assistant military instructor of the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, at Huntingdon, has resigned that position and has opened up an insurance office in his native town, Huntingdon. It is whispered around that he is slated for promotion shortly to a position in which he will wear the single bar of a first lieutenant.

At a recent meeting of Company G, Fifth Regiment, at Lewistown, Captain W. P. Schell notified the command that he had tentered his resignation to Colonel R. C. Elder. Captain Schell thus leaves the Guard after more than fifteen years of continuous service, a large part of which was spent as a commissioned officer. He entered the Guard as a private, advanced through various non-commissioned grades and was second lieutenant while in the service of the United States during the Spanish-American War, being elected first lieutenant later, and on the resignation of Captain Slagle was advanced to the command of the company.

Sixth Regiment

Captain J. O. J. Shellenberger has secured handsome and commodious new quarters for Company "G," and it is expected that Major Worman, when inspecting the company next week will note a marked improvement owing to their increased drill facilities.

Captain James R. Hunsicker, Company "F," located at Norristown, Penna., has a leaning towards a staff position, and it is said that in the event of Lieutenant Thompson's election to the junior majority that he may accept the position of battalion adjutant.

The Wheatley Cadets (Company "D," 6th Infantry), located at Phoenixville, and commanded by Captain Whitaker, is rapidly forging to the front as one of the representative companies of Colonel Coryell's command. It is confidently expected that they will be one of the leaders in the general average at the coming spring inspection.

Ninth Regiment

The inspection of Company "G," of the Ninth Infantry, located at Hazelton and commanded by Captain Calvin Pardee, Jr., will take place on Monday evening, April 13th. Colonel Dougherty with his field and several of his staff and line officers will be present, as well as a delegation from the First Brigade, who will accompany Major and Brigade Inspector Chas. H. Worman. This is regarded as a compliment to Major Clarke, the Third Brigade Inspector, who recently visited several of the inspections in Major Worman's district, and the incidental selection of Company "G" was prompted by the high general average it attained at the last inspection.

Tenth Regiment

During the last month several changes of officers have taken place in Companies A and B and two vacancies for the first and second lieutenancy in Company H, which positions, however, will shortly be filled by competent persons.

At a recent inspection in one of the companies it is stated that the actions of a certain first lieutenant became so disrespectful and unsoldierly towards the Brigade Inspector that Major Jeffries was obliged to severely censure the recreant officer. Colonel Barnett, who is a strict disciplinarian, learned of the case and at once suggested to Major Jeffries that he prefer charges, and unless this was done, he, as regimental commander, would take this action.

Twelfth Regiment

Strong efforts are being made to induce Capt. William H. Straub, Company "C," Twelfth Regiment, to withdraw his application to be placed on the retired list. Captain Straub is one of the best officers in the Twelfth.

The building in which the armory occupied by Companies "D," "G" and "I," Twelfth Regiment, was located, was destroyed by fire on the morning of Sunday, March 8. The companies were to have been inspected a week later, and had everything in shape for the Brigade Inspector.

The knapsacks, haversacks and canteens of all the companies were so badly damaged that new sets must be procured, and all three lost a portion of the canvas uniforms, ponchos, blankets, etc. The walnut gun rack of Company "G" was entirely destroyed, with the rifles it contained. The other companies saved their rifles.

Company "D" had received its new uniforms, now being issued by the State. The new canvas was wet and marked and the new blue uniforms were tossed about by the engine streams and covered with water and dirt. The new hats had never been opened, and were badly soaked.

With commendable energy the Company commanders secured new quarters on Monday, and on Tuesday, had all that was left of their equipment in the new rooms.

Company "I," Captain Lewis J. Fisher, had its uniforms cleaned, secured the use of the armory of Company "B," and was inspected on the date originally set for the inspection. Companies "D" and "G" will not be inspected until May.

Thirteenth Regiment

The Easton City Guard (Company "I," 13th Infantry) held a very enjoyable entertainment on Wednesday evening, March 25th, when Battalion Adjutant William B. Newberry gave a fine exhibition of moving pictures. This was followed by a smoker and refreshments. The object of the entertainment was to stimulate new interest in the company. It is stated that Captain Robert Horn, formerly in command of this company, will shortly re-enter its ranks and renew his old time interest in the organization.

Fourteenth Regiment

Captain Howard B. Oursler, Company "I," stationed at Wilkinsburg, has one of the best equipped company rooms in the State, and also has the proud distinction of having retained his same membership for nearly five years.

Sixteenth Regiment

The officers of this regiment will shortly assemble at Oil City in general conference for the best interest of the command, and an effort will be made to have the State pay the expenses of transportation on this occasion.

Colonel Willis J. Hulings, who has just returned from an extended tour through Mexico, has brought with him rare specimens of minerals, dye woods, rubber, cotton and other miscellaneous articles, thus showing the rich products of this fertile country.

Eighteenth Regiment

Captain James A. Stout, of Company "H," will shortly leave the service owing to business pressure.

A week's benefit will be held at the Grand Theatre in the interest of the armory fund of the Duquesne Greys, and promises to be a great financial success.

The new quarters of Company "L" are among the finest in Pittsburg, and Captain Rudolph H. Schaffer is deserving of great credit for his untiring efforts in bringing about this result.

Lieutenant Thomas J. Reneker, Inspector of Rifle Practice, is arranging for increased facilities at the rifle range this season. It is expected that the regiment will vote him sufficient funds to erect several additional targets, especially at the 200 yard range.

Recently considerable of the State property has been stolen from the armory, and in several instances this has been discovered among pawn brokers and second-hand dealers. Colonel Rutledge proposes to ask for a general court martial, and if possible break up the practice of these thefts.

Major Rust, who was connected with the regiment for seventeen years, will shortly be elected as captain of Company "G." The men have tendered him the position unanimously. This company at one time was considered the best in the regiment, and it is earnestly hoped that Major Rust will raise it to its old-time standard.

State

William H. Horstmann Co. are making a specialty of altering the dress uniforms of the National Guard officers into the new full dress uniform of the United States Army. Officers would do well to communicate with Captain Geo. Eiler, Jr., Fifth and Cherry streets, in this connection. A new catalogue has been issued by the firm and will be mailed upon application.

The members of Battery "A," or what will shortly be known as the Philadelphia Light Cavalry, elected Barclay H. Warburton as their commander on the evening of March 23d, and on Monday evening, April 6th, assembled at their quarters and presented to their commanding officer a magnificent new regulation army sabre as a token of their esteem and appreciation of his worth.

Colonel Frank K. Patterson, Inspector General of Rifle Practice, in his annual report will recommend that the rank of the inspector of rifle practice be advanced to that of captain, and that the companies be required to report at the rifle range on certain dates and qualify under the direction of the Inspector of Rifle Practice, who in return is to receive the pay of his rank while performing such duty.

The attendance at inspection of the first twenty-five companies in the Third Brigade, which include the entire Eighth Regiment, eight companies of the Fourth Regiment and eight companies of the Twelfth Regiment, shows an average present of 52.24 to each company. Only four companies out of the twenty-five failed to present the minimum, which entitles a company to 100 per cent. for attendance, and in one of these four the requisite number of men were present but an officer was absent.
